- (B) Read the passage and answer the questions below :

To be meaningful, a conversation should have an orientation or direction. It need not be strategically planted but there should be a general drift of ideas in it. It has been said by the wise that speech is silver and silence is golden. Surely silence is preferable to inconsequential chitchat. No good conversation is possible unless two or more individuals sit together feeling fully relaxed. Congeniality and understanding are the salient features of a good conversation.

Let us remember that conversation with friends is a mode of relaxation. Intimate friends could be, at times, very witty and have a satirical tone. When a teacher establishes a rapport with his students, his conversation becomes very homely and endearing.

Conversation need not be a pontifical sermon but an exchange of amicable and pleasant ideas.

A good conversation is fragile enough to be arbitrarily interrupted when a friend says, "Let's have coffee now", wish to encourage something amusing, something agreeable, and something buoyant in conversation. Let us be prompt without being stubborn, refuse without argument, and clothe, if possible, weighty matters in a motley garb. Conversation is an art but it must come artlessly.

spontaneously and genuinely. It must be developed organically.

- (i) Write the main idea of this passage in one line.
- (ii) What are the salient features of good conversation?
- (iii) Explain : Conversation is an art but must come artlessly.
- (iv) What condition has to be fulfilled for good conversation?
- (v) 'Rapport' can be best explained as _____.
  - (a) Communication
  - (b) Friendship
  - (c) Harmonious relations.
